Ohio University Chairs

Beautiful and Practical

This trio of Ohio University chairs combines beauty and dignity in its design. Each chair is finished in dull black, with rings of gold on legs and rungs. Each is of solid birch construction. The Adult Chair has cherry arms in natural finish. Each of the three chairs has the official Ohio University seal set in gold.

For Office or Home

The official chairs fit either a traditional or contemporary decor and are equally at home in living room, library, study, television room, dining room or office. They can be ordered now, by sending in the order blank on this page. You will find all three Ohio University chairs comfortable as well as attractive.

DRAWING BY LANETTE RUDDER

“An honest review of a university provides both an assessment of past accomplishments and a forward look in terms of educational objectives.”

PRESIDENT JOHN C. BAKER

MODERN MAN has come to disclaim any mystic powers of clairvoyance. But he also has learned that patterns of the future can be computed with amazing accuracy from careful examination of past and present trends.

In a rapidly growing organization, this method of scholarly crystal gazing becomes essential in avoiding the costly blunders of trial-and-error.

With this in mind, an 84-member committee at Ohio University worked throughout the past school year to produce a detailed report of things to come. This summer it submitted its projected image of the next five years at Ohio University.

Some of the committee's predictions and recommendations:

An enrollment of 11,200 by 1966, completion of from eight to 10 new dormitories in the next five years, a program of student selection for state universities, greater use of large classes, rapid expansion of masters and doctoral degree programs, advanced placement programs for gifted high school graduates, more financial aid for students, mushrooming enrollments in branch colleges, accelerated research programs in all colleges of the University, and full-time use of classrooms and laboratories.

The "Five-Year University Review" is the third of its kind carried out by Ohio University. The idea was introduced by President John C. Baker, and the other two reports, in 1950 and 1955, have proved to be unusually accurate blueprints for University operation.

In fact, President Baker attributes a great deal of the University's "sound and orderly growth and development" to the earlier reviews.

Directors of the first two studies were Dr. R. L. Morton in 1950 and Professor E. H. Galord in 1955.

Dr. Frederick H. McKelvey, former assistant to the president, directed the latest review. Dr. McKelvey left the University this July to accept a position as executive officer of a governing board controlling four state universities in Illinois.

The review committee included members of the faculty and administration, representative of every college and division and of nearly all departments and administrative segments of the university.

The general plan for this self-study was proposed by a committee which included C. Don McVay, trustee of Ohio U.; Dr. Carl Denbow, chairman of the Faculty Advisory Council; Dr. McKelvey; President Baker; and Mrs. Martha Cleveland, then executive assistant in the office of the president. An over-all committee of 26 members reviewed and amended the proposal and subsequently heard the reports of nine area committees which conducted the study.

Thus organized, all divisions of the university were able to review the developments of the past five years, to consider the present status of the university, and to present conclusions and recommendations for advancing the university's effectiveness in the future.

Work of the committees was aided by numerous studies and reports, prepared, in some cases routinely and in other cases in anticipation of emerging needs, by faculty and administrative personnel.

Categories of the study were (1) organization and operation, (2) growth, (3) curriculum, (4) branches, (5) graduate and research programs, (6) staff, (7) building, (8) finances, and publications.

In some instances the plans and recommendations will prove to be overly optimistic. Most obvious example is in capital improvements where a lack of appropriations for the coming biennium already has placed the 1961-62 proposals in a legislative garrote.

Nevertheless, the work of the review gives promise for future years, providing, as President Baker explained, an "assessment of accomplishment to the present time and a forward look in terms of carefully considered educational objectives."

Most significant of changes in the past five years, the review committee decided, has been the completion of a revised organizational plan for the university, grouping all academic activities under the eight academic deans, and all administrative activities under five administrative heads. Numerous organizational changes within the colleges and divisions of the university further reflect growth in size and scope.

Quotations from the five year review, presented on the following pages of this special alumni report, provide a capsule review of the review.

THE NEXT FIVE YEARS at OHIO UNIVERSITY

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS

A Report from the Report

"During the past five years, 44 construction projects and 14 major rehabilitation and repair projects were completed at Ohio University. The University has submitted to the Division of Capital Planning and Improvement . . . a capital improvement plan for 1961-67 (shown at right)."

"The projected enrollment increases for the years ahead indicates that these proposed expenditures are necessary and reasonable."

"The acquisition of land continues to hold priority in any plans for the development of the University. When the Urban Renewal Program is realized, a major step in this serious problem will have been achieved."

"All of the expenditures for dormitories are made from funds borrowed by the issuance of revenue bonds pledging the dormitory revenues. . . . In 1959-60 dormitories were housing 136 percent of intended capacity, a fact which, added to the prospective enrollment increases, further emphasizes the need for continuing the construction of dormitories."

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT PLAN

The university has submitted to the Division of Capital Planning and Improvement of the State of Ohio, with trustee approval, the following capital improvement plan for 1961-67.

For Academic, Administrative, Recreational, or Service Purposes (from state appropriated funds)	$17,540,000
For Housing and Feeding Purposes (from self-liquidating funds)	$14,050,000
For Land Acquisition	$ 1,000,000

EMPHASIS ON QUALITY

"There is a close correlation between excellence of instruction and time available to the faculty for such purposes as independent self-study, research and creative work. One means of making such time available is by a reduction of teaching load. Another is an increased use of trained assistants."

"There is a continuing faculty responsibility to raise the student's sights in his field of study."

"Consideration should be given to the creation of a special Honors Scholars status. This would be open to students who achieve high accumulative averages and might include such things as special library privileges, greater flexibility in programs and others."

"Statistics reveal a marked reduction in extra-curricular activity in the past five-year period. The Committee commends this trend and urges CAC to continue policy-making consistent with a balance between extra-curricular and academic activity. Groups concerned with leadership should plan programs aimed at fostering intellectual curiosity and high academic standards."

DEPENDENCE ON THE BRANCH COLLEGES

"Only well-qualified people will be hired as faculty members for the branches. All branch teachers must meet the standards established for regular campus faculty members and must meet the approval of the appropriate area or departmental chairman or his representative."

"In order to assure that equivalent courses and training are offered on campus and in the branches, there will be direct communication between the branch teacher and the appropriate representative of the department or area on campus . . . course outlines, syllabi, textbooks and other standard supplementary materials should be provided for the branch teacher by the cooperating campus teacher."

"It is recommended that the Branch Colleges continue to move in the direction of providing separate facilities for students in the branch communities. . . . Branches should go to daytime operation whenever and wherever such units can be supported and justified."

"Off-campus laboratory facilities must be the equivalent of on-campus equipment, and must have the approval of the department concerned. Also, if a course requires a laboratory on campus, it must have a laboratory off-campus."

DAY-TIME BRANCH PROGRAM was inaugurated this fall at Portsmouth, where citizens carried out a fund campaign to buy and renovate old school building. Story of the grand opening will be in a future issue of the Alumnus.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH serves also as classroom building at Chillicothe, where a day-time branch college operation is beginning its second year. Chillicothe citizens are purchasing an area of land as a site for a branch building.

WHAT ALUMNI CAN DO

"The University must continue, through the Ohio University Fund, Inc., to seek funds which may be used for the financing of graduate students and graduate education through research assistantships."

"We must continue to encourage greater expansion in research. . . . It is primarily through such activities that the reputation of Ohio University is established in the world of scholars. . . . The overall research policy is to consider research and instruction to be inseparable and therefore no research activity is to be set up except in coordination with the instructional activities of the departments of the University."

"The dollar expenditures for the library, including amounts spent for acquisitions, have been rising. . . . Sizeable allocations are needed for Ph.D. programs. . . . Further substantial expenditures for acquisitions are imperative."

"Outside gifts must provide financing for many areas of activity which cannot be obtained through state appropriated funds. Areas in which the Ohio University Fund, Inc., will be called upon for assistance are: Scholarships, research, faculty travel, special library needs, special events, and general administrative expenses."

A New Nation Speaks Out

Nigeria's ambassador to the United States
keynotes OU's Conference on World Affairs

GOVERNOR Michael V. DiSalle and Ambassador Udochi shared spotlight at Conference dinner in Baker University Center.

PANELISTS Ellis O. Jones, Ambassador Udochi, Gifford B. Doxsee and Dean F. N. Hamblin answered student questions in afternoon session of the Conference.

PARRYING leading questions with diplomatic agility, but thrusting sharply on occasion, the distinguished visitor from Africa scored a hearty touché on his appreciative Ohio University summer audience.

Nigerian Ambassador to the U. S. Julius Momo Udochi made it clear that his country wants to develop its own system of government without pressure from East or West. But he also was emphatic in asserting that there is no Communist threat in Africa at the present time.

"Communism runs contrary to the deep traditions of the African people, and any influence from Moscow is a long way off," he told a capacity crowd in Ewing Auditorium.

The occasion was Ohio University's fourth annual World Affairs Conference August 7. As principal speaker, Ambassador Udochi reflected the good humor, serious purpose, and deep dedication that exemplifies the leadership of the new independent nation (Nigeria gained its independence from Great Britain last year). An imposing figure in the flowing robes of his country, the ambassador addressed students, faculty and guests, then faced the analytical eyes of newsmen and television cameras. In each instance he gained new respect for his emerging nation.

"African nations today want to join neither of the two major political factions but to stand always on the side of what they believe to be the truth in any specific controversy," he said.

Later Ambassador Udochi joined Ellis O. Jones of the U. S. Department of State, Dean F. N. Hamblin of the OU College of Education, and Gifford B. Doxsee of the History Department in a round table discussion on Africa's position in the world today. Professor Doxsee was chairman of the Conference.

Among the guests at the Conference were Ohio Governor Michael V. DiSalle, Highway Safety Director Grant Keys (an OU graduate), and State Finance Director James Maloon.

Stressing the importance of expanding education in his country, Ambassador Udochi told of the value already received from Ohio University's teacher training project which this fall begins its fourth year in Ibadan, capital of Nigeria's Western Region.

A NUMBER in the Crowd

KNOWN ONLY AS A NUMBERED enemy to the home town fans, Field Judge Swearingen completes a long run beside San Francisco halfback R. C. Owens, who leaps high in the corner of the end zone for a 38-yard touchdown pass.

A PROFESSIONAL football official is a man who:
Enjoys the unique sensation of gathering himself up after being run over by a 290-pound giant while the laughter and cheers of 60,000 fans register unanimous approval of his painful predicament;

Attempts to remain anonymous while working in front of national television cameras;

Studies detailed rule books with the intensity of a Ph.D. candidate preparing for his final examination, only to be considered wrong by thousands of casual observers each time he makes a decision;

Becomes a Sphinx when confronted by a writer.

Among the 44 National Football League officials to whom these descriptions apply is an easy-going, likeable alumnus of Ohio University who would prefer to be recognized only as "Number 21", but cannot hide the fact that he is really Fred Swearingen, owner of an Athens sporting goods store.

Fred and his fellow officials have good reason to prefer a certain degree of anonymity. It is one of the prime essentials of their trade.

Well aware of the danger that could come from any scandal, the league is chary of its reputation for honesty. A major precaution is preventing any situation that could lead players, coaches or fans to suspect prejudiced officiating.

Although he works about 17 games a season, Fred, now in his second year with the NFL, is given each assignment only 10 days in advance. Until that time he has no idea whether he will be going to San Francisco, New York, Dallas, or one of the other cities where a NFL team might play. Neither does he know who the other four members of his officiating crew will be.

When he arrives at his destination, usually on Saturday night, he goes directly to his hotel, where he remains in relative solitude until the game on Sunday. After the game he goes directly from locker room to airport for the return trip home.

Friendly chats with coaches, players or even fans are taboo. Even when he passes a friend such as Vince Costello, OU graduate playing line-backer for the Cleveland Browns, there is little, if any greeting.

Newspaper reporters, knowing and respecting this code of ethics, stay away from the dressing rooms of officials. If any statement on a particular ruling or play is wanted, it is granted through formal channels.

On the plane, Fred reads the NFL football rule book of more than 100 pages, sleeps, or browses through magazines. If he engages in conversation with a fellow passenger, he never reveals the purpose of his flight.

Back home he avoids making comparisons of teams or giving opinions of players and coaches, even when among his closest friends. Any writer asking him who he believes will win the league title receives a polite smile, but nothing more. Even his wife, Freda, and their children (Jane, 11; Jimmy, 7) get very little information about teams.

On the subject of professional football in general, however, the former OU student and his fellow officials brighten up, and even open up.

"I never cease to be amazed by the size and maneuverability of these pro players," Fred explains. "You just can't believe that 290-pound, six-foot-seven men could move like they can. And when a quarter-back faces four of these men stretched upward, arms extended to prevent a pass, it is like facing an infuriated Kodiak bear."

No False Hustle

Do pro teams lack the hustle of college and high school players?

"Not on your life," Fred replies, without hesitation. "They have learned to eliminate such false hustle as skidding helplessly after a man who has already crossed the goal line. As professionals, they have learned through experience to minimize wasted motion in order to have maximum energy when they need it. But they are putting out 100 percent. You can bet on that."

As for hustle, however, no player on the field can match an official in Fred's position. As field judge, his permanent assignment so far, he runs farther during a game than any player.

Stationed deep (15-20 yards) behind the defensive team, he is responsible for long passes, long runs, punts and runbacks. He must run along side the most deeply penetrating possible pass receiver, even if the man turns out to be a decoy. In a professional game, where 50 to 65 passes are thrown, this can become quite a chore.

And when a 10-second back dashes 60 yards to snare a touchdown pass, he goes to the bench for a rest. The field judge, who raced along with him, picks up the ball after the extra point and gallops — not walks — along the sidelines and then to the center of the field to put the ball into play.

All of which helps keep Fred Swearingen at the same 170 pounds that he weighed when he was piloting a Hell Diver in the South Pacific during World War II.

The tour of service with the Navy Air Force, from 1942 until 1945 followed his graduation (B. S. in physical education) from OU. As an undergraduate, he had become interested in officiating in "the famous Jack Rhoads class."

In 1945 he began a dual career of sports official and high school coach. After coaching at The Plains and at Athens High School, he bought the Court Street store now known as "Swearingen Sporting Goods, Inc."

As an official in basketball and football, he became known as one of the best in the state. He handled the state basketball finals and other top tournaments, and in 1953 became a basketball and football official for the Mid-American Conference.

After applying for a contract with the NFL, Fred was assigned to a 1959 game in Philadelphia, where league executives watched him work. The next year he received the coveted job.

At the beginning of each season Fred and the other officials, among them insurance men, sheriffs, industrial executives and businessmen, gather for a three-day meeting in Chicago. There they discuss rules, procedures and equitable rulings (how to handle situations not covered by formal rules, such as a fan tackling an intended pass receiver).

Being a field judge, Fred, whose permanent number is "21", has to make some of the most controversial calls in the game.

"The nightmare of all is the pass-interference call," he says with feeling. "The defensive man, not knowing whether the opponent coming at him is a receiver or a blocker, is permitted to knock him out of the play. However, if the offensive man is to catch the pass, he cannot block the defensive man or it will be offensive interference. If it turns out to be a running play, there is no interference. Then, of course, after a pass is thrown, the defensive man no longer has the right to take him out, until someone has touched the ball."

Simple — if you see it from the stands and are only concerned with the welfare of one team.

Has Fred, one of the youngest officials in the league,

TWO MAJOR changes occurred in the intercollegiate athletic setup at Ohio University during the summer.

The first of these came with the resignation of Carroll C. Widdoes as athletic director July 8. The unexpected announcement ended 13 years of service as head football coach and athletic director for the soft-spoken, genial "Wid". He announced that he will stay on at the University as associate professor of physical education.

Less than two weeks later, on July 21, the office of President John C. Baker announced that Brandon T. Grover would take over Widdoes' duties with assistance from Robert M. Wren.

Grover, however, was to retain his title as assistant to the president but his duties in this office were to be curtailed considerably. The new athletic director is certainly not new to most alumni of the past 40 years.

Since 1920, a year after he was graduated from Ohio University, Grover has been employed at his alma mater. A native of Middleport, Ohio, the 63-year-old administrator has spent 18 years with the athletic department and the past 23 in other administrative roles.

His first job was as graduate manager of athletics and an assistant coach. But, in 1923, Grover was named head basketball coach and from that time through the 1938 season his teams won 174 games and lost 113 for a .606 percentage. During this time Grover also served as end coach for Don Peden.

"Butch", as most of his friends know him, left the athletic department in 1938 to become director of public relations for Ohio U. In 1943, he was appointed assistant to the president, a job he still holds.

As assistant athletic director, Bob Wren gains deserved recognition for his fine work as coach of the baseball team at Ohio U. since 1949 plus two years as assistant to the dean of men. The 40-year-old Ohio U. graduate of 1943 will retain his duties as varsity baseball coach.

Since returning to his alma mater after five years of professional baseball experience with the old Toledo Mudhens of the American Association, Wren has also been an assistant football and basketball coach and while performing all these tasks also served from 1954-1956 in the Dean of Men's office.

Major College Status

The second major change occurred when it was announced from Chicago early in August that Ohio University, along with Bowling Green and Miami of the Mid-American Conference, had been elevated to "major college" status in football. The announcement climaxed several years of hard work on the part of Conference Commissioner David Reese and others to attain "major" status for the conference.

This was not done completely, but naming the three schools opens the door for the others to follow suit within a year or two.

The classification committee of the Football Writers Association of America, the group designated by the National Collegiate Athletic Association to perform the duty of the selection of teams as "major" or "small" college in football, rules that a team must play at least half of its games against other teams classified as "major". Since this has been impossible in the past for Mid-American teams, which had to play over half of their games against other conference opponents, the committee designated that over half of all the outside opponents played by the conference schools as a whole must be "major". Under the new setup the conference should be major by 1963.

The Mid-American Conference has been considered "major" in basketball and baseball for some time.

Even with these developments, Ohio U. football fortunes in 1961 will be hard pressed to equal those of 1960. Then the Bobcats were acclaimed national "college division" champions, Mid-American Conference champions, and Coach Bill Hess was named Ohio College Coach of the Year.

The 10-0 record was the all-time best in 65 years of football at Ohio U. Six of the squad were named to the all-conference first team, three played in post-season all-star games and eight had professional tryouts this year. Fifteen lettermen are gone and 20 returning from that all-time best team.

One of last year's honors is definitely out of reach—the “college division” championship. Reason for that has been explained above. The new “major” classification, however, is a hard-won honor and will add much prestige to future football at Ohio U.

What then can be expected from the 66th football season at Ohio U., the first as a “major” football team?

Coach Hess states, “We have the personnel returning to have another fine year. Our greatest handicap, however, is halfback speed. We lost five of our lettermen at this position and they were a great influence on the record we had in 1960. This year will see more power at the position, but less speed.

“Our overall team speed and size should be good. I think the Mid-American Conference will be better balanced than it ever has been and it should be an interesting race all the way.”

Key personnel of the 1961 Bobcats, as pointed out by Hess, are the three tri-captains, Tackle Ted Stute (only all-conference first team performer returning), Halfback Otis Wagner and Fullback Allen Miller, plus Quarterback Roger Merb.

“The halfback situation and our young sophomore line depth will be keys to how well we do this year,” Hess added. “Determining factors in the success of this football team will be the attitude, condition and lack of injury of the players.”

New Freshman Coach

A change has also been made in the freshman coaching ranks for this fall. Dave “Bucky” Wagner, all-conference quarterback last year, will be head freshman coach while working towards a master’s degree. He replaces Stan Huntsman who will devote full time to coaching the varsity cross country and track teams.

The new Bobkitten boss will have a staff of graduate assistants, three of whom, George Belu, John Dickason and Gerry Zawacki, were teammates last year.

Wagner calls East Sparta, Ohio, home and played his high school football at Sandy Valley High School. He will also coach the Bobkitten baseball team in the spring.

Mr. “X”

Makes the Team

Technician Fulks
and
Portable Friend

A ROOKIE seeing action for the first time in last year’s football season at Ohio University earned its spurs and will be an important member of the 1961 and future Bobcat teams.

The newcomer was instrumental in the success of the 1960 Ohio U. team which emerged from a 10-0 season as national “small college” and Mid-American Conference champion and brought for Coach Bill Hess Ohio College Coach of the year laurels.

This “rookie” weighs only 45 pounds but is important as any member of the team, including a 260-pound tackle. Sometimes it sees action only once during a game, but this often means the difference between winning or losing.

The new vital cog in the football machine of Bill Hess is a portable X-Ray unit. It was “recruited” by the University from a retired physician in a small Athens County community. Its own coach directs its every move. He is Charles Fulks, local medical technician and member of the Ohio University medical staff.

The unit was on the sideline in the 1960 opener at the University of Dayton. Tackle Mike Kielkovicz had his hand stepped on in the second quarter. The unit went to work through the direction of Fulks. By the end of the half-time intermission, a picture had been taken of the injured hand and the X-Ray film developed in a darkened area under the stadium. There was no evidence of a fracture.

The injured hand was taped and protected from further injury by Trainer Al Hart and Kielkovicz returned to action in the second half. “Without this X-Ray unit we would not have taken the chance of the boy returning to action,” said Hart.

Another time, Quarterback Roger Merb’s ankle was injured. The resulting X-Ray with the boy’s father looking on proved reassuring to the parent when it came out “negative.”

From now on, the portable unit will be a part of the team at home and on the road. Fulks will be at its side always.

Last spring a regular hospital-type unit was also acquired by the athletic department from the University Health Center which obtained a new one. “It is a very fine, up-to-date X-Ray unit,” Fulks assured. It has a permanent home in a small room across from the physical therapy room in the Brandon T. Grover Physical Education Center.

A few steps down the hall is a small room which has been converted into a darkroom for Fulks’ use when the permanent X-Ray machine is used.

Ohio University officials believe few other schools have equipment like the two X-Ray machines at their immediate disposal.

Miss United States

JOANNE DYER HILTY receives a trophy from Don Swenson, president of the National Press Photographers' Association, after winning the titles of Miss National Press Photographer and Miss United States.

By Joann Conover Reiss

A STARRY-EYED Ohio University alumna walked unbelievably up to the stage June 22 to accept the titles of "Miss United States" and "Miss National Press Photographer" bestowed on her after five days of competition in Wichita, Kans.

Joanne Dyer Hilty, '60, had won the hearts of all with her captivating smile, sparkling eyes and trim figure.

Winning the national title sent the then Miss Dyer to the International Beauty Congress at Long Beach, Calif., in July where she competed with selected beauties from the world over for the "Miss Universe" title. Although she came away a loser she had much to look forward to.

First, there was her postponed wedding to Ensign David Hilty of Findlay, O., They were to be married July 27 but her qualifying for the Beauty Congress, July 20-30, forced her to move the date up to Aug. 5.

Second, her previous wins netted her a "heap" of prizes, including a trip to Las Vegas, materials for a new home, a camera, a diamond studded wrist watch, a Corvair sports car, a trip to New York where she received a new wardrobe and about $15,000 in cash.

And finally, she was anxious to get back to "plain old meat and potatoes" after a week's diet of salads for lunch.

Soon after the International Beauty Congress, the 22-year-old Miss United States was hurriedly finishing last minute details for a formal wedding in Trinity Methodist Church in her hometown of Lima, O.

Immediately after the wedding the newlyweds flew to Alameda, Calif., where Ensign Hilty is stationed with the U. S. Navy attending the Air Intelligence School there.

The Road to Beauty Fame

Joanne started on her road to beauty fame by winning the Miss Limaland title July 4 of last year. The local newspaper, the Lima Citizen, sponsored her at the Ohio Press Photographer's Pageant in Columbus where she walked away with the "Miss Ohio Press Photographer" title.

"There were 57 girls in the Columbus contest, representing every section of the state," commented Joanne, "I was fortunate enough to win again and along with that came the honor of representing Ohio in the National Press Photographer's Pageant at Wichita, Kans., the week of June 18."

It was at the latter contest that the OU alumna picked up both the "Miss United States" and "Miss National Press Photographer" titles.

Prior to entering the Lima contest the new Mrs. Hilty was secretary to the assistant controller at the Ohio Oil Company in Findley, O. "Merely as a hobby," she added, "I did quite a bit of modeling in the area." Her trim figure boasts a 35-23-35. She is five-feet-six and 119 pounds.

As to the outcome of the international competition Mrs. Hilty said, "I wasn't disappointed. Actually, I had the five finalists picked. I thought either Iceland or Holland would be the winner." Miss Holland won.

She observed that European women are "five years ahead" of Americans in fashion and make-up, commenting that they carry "a bag full of tricks."

Dual Retirement

SIXTY-THREE YEARS of teaching and administrative experience came to a close in June as the husband and wife team of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kepner, both '32, retired.

Mr. Kepner retired from his post as principal of Howland High School in Youngstown and his wife, the former Florence McKown, from the post of teacher at Fitch High School.

Travel and possibly a foreign teaching assignment are in the Kepners' future plans. They plan to travel to the West Coast to visit their son, Dr. Robert A. Kepner, who is with the U.S. Navy in San Diego, Calif., and later decide upon an offer to teach in Caracas, Venezuela.

"Our connection with the teaching position in Caracas came as a result of an advertisement in the NEA Journal," explains Mr. Kepner, "However, we have been forced to postpone, at least temporarily, any plans for foreign travel as a result of a coronary occlusion I suffered last winter."

Mr. Kepner started his teaching career in 1925 with the South Pymatuning Township, Pa., school system. He served as principal of the Brookfield Township school for three years and was superintendent of Bazetta Township and Southington Township schools. Immediately prior to taking his post at Howland, he was superintendent of Jackson-Milton Township schools for 10 years.

Forty Pounds of Good Luck

CHARITY TURNED to gold for Valeria McClintock Crow, '32. On the one and only sweepstakes ticket she has ever owned Mrs. Crow walked off with the consolation prize of 40 pounds or $110.90.

The ticket originated in Ireland even though Mrs. Crow purchased it in Los Angeles, Calif., where she lives. It was for the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes held yearly for the benefit of Ireland Hospitals.

"Since I'm not a confirmed gambler," says Mrs. Crow, "I deposited $100 at the California Savings Bank, then I purchased a green (naturally) revolving clothesline for my daughter and son-in-law who recently purchased a new home, and finally I bought a box of chocolates for the employees."

The Crows operate the Webster's Coffee Shop in Los Angeles.

From Navy Officer to Army Wife

IN THIS GAME the Army and the Navy were both winners.

It was a game of cupid that resulted in the marriage of Navy Lt. Cmdr. Helen Jackson, '33, to Army Col. Bennett L. Jackson nearly a year ago at the Navy Chapel on Treasure Island near San Francisco, Calif.

Despite teasing the Jacksons have received from friends they still contend that it was a simple case of "boy meets girl." However, they both admit that their respective services were definitely responsible for getting them to "the right place at the right time."

The two were on duty in Washington, D.C., when they met.

Mrs. Jackson has since retired from the Navy to join her husband at Fort Rucker, Ala., and take up her new duties as an Army wife. She entered the service eighteen years ago and has served the Navy in a variety of assignments including duty in New York, Seattle, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico.

Colonel Jackson commands the 2nd Battle Group, 31st Infantry, at Fort Rucker. Past assignments have taken him to England, Denmark, France, Germany, Austria and countries of the Middle East.

Originally from Kentucky, Colonel Jackson is a graduate of the University of Maryland.

Buz Does What Fred Said

THE CLOAK AND DAGGER continuity in the latest sequence of the Buz Sawyer comic strip is the result of an Ohio University graduate's imagination.

Navy Capt. Frederic M. Lloyd, '40, known to many friends as "Buzz", is an acquaintance of the Buz Sawyer artist, Roy Crane. He and a companion were responsible for suggesting to Crane that Sawyer be portrayed as a Naval Reserve officer on active duty first as a test pilot and then as an intelligence officer.

Captain Lloyd is now occupying a top Naval post at the Pentagon, that of director of media relations for the Navy. A BSJ graduate, he assumed this post after a career of flying and public relations assignments.

Lloyd entered the Navy in 1941. He received his flight training at Lakehurst, N. J., lighter-than-air facility and made the first carrier landing aboard the USS Altamah, one of the early developed escort carriers.

The captain assumed his public relations duties after the war and duty in the Pacific. He was assigned to NATO as chief public information officer for the Atlantic Fleet and later helped staff the Sixth Fleet visit of President Eisenhower to the Mediterranean.

Lloyd's assignments have taken him all over the world. In fact, on one assignment to the South Pole he "circled the world 19 times" on a patrol flight of that area.

A NUMBER

ever made a mistake? The question draws a broad grin.

"I'll own up to two," he agrees. "But neither of them concerned rule interpretations. Both were results of quick whistles. In one, a player intercepted a pass, then fell flat on his face. I blew the whistle, only to see him get up and run — a legal procedure in professional ball. In the other, I blew the whistle when I thought a player had caught a punt. Actually, it went through his hands but his body blocked it from my view."

What did he do then?

"What could I do? I told the players I made a mistake but my decision would have to stand. They understand. I remember in the second instance, Joe Schmidt of the (Detroit) Lions said, 'Okay, so he made a mistake; let's play football.' That's all there was to it."

Other sports figures know Fred Swearingen, however, as a man who makes few mistakes. Official scorers in basketball agree that their job is a breeze when Fred is on the floor. Other officials, such as Bob Wren, with whom Fred has worked most frequently in the past 16 years, say he has a natural talent for staying "on top of the play."

Fred himself admits only that he would "rather officiate and play golf than eat." If he had his way, he would become known as a golfer and remain anonymous as an official.

Kickoff for Leadership

The Ohio University Fund, Inc.

A TOTAL of 2500 donors. Should YOU be one of these individuals? The serious decision concerning a contribution is one that you alone must make.

There can be no doubt that your contribution will help Ohio University's prestige and development. You will also realize the personal pride and self-satisfaction stemming from the knowledge that your contribution is furthering the cause of our youth and the security of our nation. Authors of the Ordinance of the Northwest Territory in 1787 foresaw the possible future needs of Ohio University in this statement of purpose: "Religion, Morality, and Knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind—schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

This ordinance made possible the establishment of the University. Since this early start her strength, prestige and leadership have never diminished as alumni and friends have solidified her position over the years through loyalty, self-sacrifice and annual gifts to her.

The importance of Ohio University's current needs will be emphasized in a forthcoming letter each alumnus and past friend will receive. YOU will then have the opportunity to participate in the 1961-62 Annual Alumni and Friends Giving Campaign.

Your decision is of paramount importance to Ohio University.

WHERE THE MONEY WENT

THE 1960-61 Annual Alumni and Friends Giving Campaign surpassed all previous drives by establishing a new high in a total amount contributed. Seven hundred and ninety alumni and friends of Ohio University contributed $82,345, an increase of $22,080 over the 1959-60 figure.

The projects receiving money from this drive are: Student Aid; President's Account; Library; and Research.

A large number of contributions were made without restriction and are being used at the discretion of the Ohio University Fund, Inc. Board of Trustees for necessities in many vital University areas.

These are just a few of the many critical needs toward which gifts will be applied in the future. There are many areas in which state appropriations are not sufficient to cover needs which the Ohio University Fund must meet to maintain quality standards.

Realistically, our "quota" of these needs is the preservation of the Ohio University education, in which every alumnus and friend has a stake.

Ohio University's Greatest Asset is the Loyalty of Its Alumni & Friends

SEVERAL MILESTONES were added to Ohio University's history at the annual Summer Commencement in August. Six doctorates were awarded, the largest number to be awarded at any one commencement since the inauguration of the doctoral program in 1956.

MRS. MCINTYRE

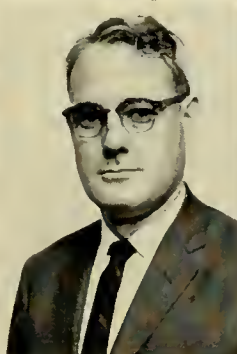

THE FIRST WOMAN PhD graduate was among the six. Miss Virginia M. Branson of Williams-town, W. Va., received her degree in the field of speech pathology. She is now an associate professor of speech pathology and audiology at Southern Connecticut State College.

AMONG THE 353 that received their degrees and heard Hiram College President Paul F. Sharp deliver the commencement address that Saturday was one who probably worked the hardest and had to hurdle the biggest of all handicaps to earn her degree. Mrs. Carolyn Kneebusch McIntyre is confined to a wheel chair and has no use of one arm and partial use of the other. Despite these obstacles Carolyn came to Ohio University a year ago in September determined to earn her master's degree in the field of speech and hearing therapy. She received that degree and is now actively employed as a speech therapist at a cerebral palsy center in Akron, O.

DEATH, RETIREMENT AND a new position took three people from the ranks of the Ohio University faculty and administrative staff during the summer. In two instances new faces now fill the vacancies. Gerald Work was named assistant dean of men pro tem replacing the late Dean Paul J.

MR. WORK

Schofer who died suddenly June 30. Work will hold the post for one year during which time a permanent successor will be found. He is presently working on a master's degree in education with future plans of going into university or college student personnel work. He was head resident of Johnson Hall during the 1960-61 school year.

DR. THOMAS S. SMITH filled the vacancy left by Dr. Frederick H. McKelvey who resigned to become executive officer of a governing board controlling four state universities in Illinois. With the title of assistant to the president, Dr. Smith heads an area of the University that includes summer session, extension, admissions, library, ROTC and aviation. Dr. Smith has been a member of the Ohio University physics faculty since 1952.

THE RETIREMENT of Miss Grace Morley, assistant professor of music education, came after the June commencement and was not included in the other retirement announcements. Miss Morley left the University after 25 years of teaching. She is now living in her hometown of Lincoln, Neb., with her sister.

THE INAUGURATION of a day-time branch operation in Portsmouth this fall was preceded by the announcement of a full-time director, Maurice Ralph Elliott, former dean of boys at Portsmouth High School. Elliott has been serving as part-time director of that branch since 1946.

A SURPRISE PRESENTATION of a plaque was made to Dr. James R. Patrick at the June faculty meeting by the Air Force ROTC Department for his more than ten years as coordinator of ROTC affairs at Ohio University. A professor of psychology, Dr. Patrick is a retired lieutenant colonel and veteran of both World Wars.

DR. PATRICK

AN INCREASE in the comprehensive registration fee for this school year was announced in July. For Ohio students the fee went from $150 to $175 per semester.
